1. Lord Lytton is not associated with which of the following?

- (a) The Strachey Commission (b) The Arms Act
(c) The Vernacular Press Act (d) The Ilbert Bill

69th B.P.S.C. (Pre) 2023

Ans. (d)

Lord Lytton was an English politician who served as the Viceroy of India from 1876 to 1880. His tenure as Viceroy was marked by a controversial policy known as the Vernacular Press Act of 1878, which aimed to regulate the Indian vernacular press and limit its freedom of expression. The policies introduced included the Indian Arms Act of 1878, according to which, it was a criminal offense for Indians to carry arms without a license. The Act was discriminatory as it did not apply to the British, Anglo-Indians, Europeans, and certain government personnel. Famine Codes were given by the Famine Commission that was set up in 1878 under the Chairmanship of Sir Richard Strachey (Strachey Commission) during tenure of Lord Lytton only. The infamous 'Famine Codes', have been criticized for their handling of the 1876-1878 famine in India, which resulted in significant loss of life.

Ilbert bill on the other hand was introduced in 1883 by Lord Rippon that allowed Indian Judges and Magistrates to try British Offenders in criminal cases at district level.

(c) Only 2, 3 and 4 (d) 1, 2, 3 and 4

69th B.P.S.C. (Pre) 2023

Ans. (d)

The Indian Council Act of 1861 implemented the strategy of legislative devolution, and the probable outcome of this was Mayo's Resolution of 1870, focusing on financial decentralization. The Imperial Government, prompted by administrative efficiency and financial constraints, opted to transfer the control of certain administrative departments - including education, medical services, and roads - to provincial governments. This marked the inception of local financial management. To ensure fiscal stability, provincial governments were granted the authority to rely on local taxation to balance their budgets. Lord Mayo's resolution had delineated - "Local interest, supervision, and care are necessary to success in the management of the funds devoted to education, sanitation, medical relief, and local public works. The operation of this resolution in its full meaning and integrity will afford opportunities for the development of self-government, for strengthening municipal institution, and for the association of Natives and Europeans to a greater extent than heretofore in the administration of affairs."

- (a) Warren Hastings (b) Lord Dalhousie
(c) Henri Larins (d) Lord Hastings

47th B.P.S.C. (Pre) 2005

Ans. (a)

Warren Hastings and Wellesley were related to the security cell or Ring Fence policy. Warren Hastings waged war with Mysore and Marathas, in the spirit of achieving equal status with other Indian princely states. At this time the Company tried to form a buffer state around its state. Its purpose was only to protect our state or we can also say that protect the borders of our neighboring states so that our borders are safe. At that time the fear was mainly from Afghans and Marathas. Therefore, the Company took over the task of arranging the defence of Awadh on the condition that the Nawab of Awadh should bear the burden of that expenditure and thus the defense of Awadh was the defense of Bengal. The arrival of Wellesley marked a change in the Company's relations with the Indian princely states. Wellesley's aimed to force the Indian princely states to depend on the Company for their defence. He tried to bring the Indian princely states under British political power and military protection. Following are the major British policies towards the princely states-

1. Company's struggle for equality with Indian princely states (1740–1765 A.D.)
2. 'Safety Cell' policy or Ring fence policy (1765-1813 A.D.)
3. Subordinate separation policy (1813-1857 A.D.)

Ans. (a)

The subsidiary alliance system was introduced in India by Lord Wellesley. The main principles of a subsidiary alliance were –

1. An Indian ruler entering into a subsidiary alliance with the British had to accept British forces within his territory and also agree to pay for their maintenance.
2. The ruler would accept a British resident in his state.
3. An Indian ruler who entered into a subsidiary alliance would not enter into any further alliance with any other power.
4. The ruler would not employ any Europeans other than the British.
5. In case of a conflict with any other state, he would agree to the resolution decided by the British.
6. The ruler would acknowledge East India Company as the paramount power in India.
7. In return for the ruler accepting its conditions, the company undertook the protection of the state from external dangers and disorders.
8. If the Indian ruler failed to make the payments required by the alliance, then part of its territory was to be taken away as a penalty.

The Nizam of Hyderabad was the first to enter into such an alliance. The Nawab of Awadh was next to accept the alliance, and Maratha ruler Bajirao II (1802 A.D.) also accepted a subsidiary alliance. Several states like Hyderabad (1798 A.D.), Tanjore and Mysore (1799 A.D.), Awadh (1801 A.D.), Bhonsle (1803 A.D.), Sindhiya (1804 A.D.), Holkar (1818 A.D.) adopted this system.
