Alauddin treated Ramchandra well and honoured him the title of 'Rai Rayan'. Six months later he was given one lakh gold Tankas and the district of Navsari and was sent back to his state. *Malik Kafur also led a campaign against Ramchandra's son Shankerdev in 1312 AD. All their privileges were abolished. *Taxes were collected from their lands and the rest other taxes were also taken, due to which there was no difference between Khut (Zamindar) and Balahar (ordinary farmer). *The main objective of Alauddin's revenue and tax system was to establish a powerful and autocratic state. *He took the land from all those people who had been granted land as 'Milq' (property, prize, indraat, pensions given by the state) and 'Waqf' (charitable land), etc., Consequently, the Khalisa land was developed on a large scale. *Alauddin Khalji fixed 50% of the yield as the land tax (Kharaj).
