

Economic Impact of British Rule on India

*The Indian administration was in British hands and was conducted in a manner subserving the interests of England.

Home charges refer to the expenditure incurred in England by the Secretary of State for India on behalf of India. It includes dividends to the shareholders of the East India Company, interest on public debt raised abroad, Civil and Military charges, store purchases in England etc.

*Interest and profit on private foreign capital were another important leakage from the National Income System.

*For banking, insurance and shipping services India had to make huge payments.

*In British India, a term Imperial Preference was often used for the concessions granted to British Imports in India. According to this, almost no charge was levied on British Imports but Indian Exports were charged heavily in Britain. *Strong preference to invest in land property by the rich class of India during British Rule proved detrimental for the development of Industries as they were low on Capital Investments. *In 1793 A.D. Cornwallis started Permanent Settlement of Land Revenue. Permanent Settlement was called by different names such as Istamrari, Jagirdari, Malgujari and Bishvedari. This system was launched in Bengal, Bihar, Odisha, Varanasi of U.P. etc. Around 19% of British India was under Permanent Settlement. A new section of Zamindars was announced as landowners who were to provide 10/11 of the total revenue to Company and were paid the rest 1/11 of the total revenue for their duties. In the Permanent Settlement, Zamindars were small capitalist. Ryotwari System was generated by Thomas Munro and Alexander Reed. Alexander Reed first implemented this land system in Baramahal district of Tamil Nadu. Later on, this system spread to Madras, some parts of Bombay, East Bengal, Assam and Kurg (a part of modern Karnataka) etc.

*According to this system, the Ryots were given the ownership and rights to occupy the lands and they were required to pay the revenue directly to the government. By this system, the farmer was the owner of his land. A total of around 51% British India area was covered under this settlement. The rate of land taxes in this system was very high and the recovery of agricultural rent was handled very strictly.

*Under Mahalwari System the unit for revenue settlement is the village or the mahal. The village land belongs to the village community. The community was jointly responsible for the payment of the land revenue. *This system prevailed in around 30% of British India covering U.P., Central Province and Punjab (with some changes).

*The constant flow of wealth from India to England for which India did not receive any adequate economic, commercial or material return has been described by national leaders and economists as 'drain' of wealth from India. Before 1813 AD company had a recurring surplus which accrued from (a) profits from oppressive land revenue policy (b) profits from its trade resulting from monopolistic control over Indian markets and (c) exactions made by the company's officials. The surplus was used by the Company as an "investment", i.e. for making a purchase of exportable items in India and elsewhere. Against the exports of goods made out of this investment, India did not receive anything in return. This system was brought to an end by the charter act of 1813. *From 1813 AD onwards economic drain took the form of 'unrequited' exports. Dadabhai Naoroji described the drain of wealth as the "evil of all evils" and the main cause of Indian poverty. *Dadabhai Naoroji was the first and most important propounder of the Drain of Wealth theory. He with his articles and books 'England duties to India' (paper), 'Poverty and Unbritish rule in India', 'The wants and means of India' and 'On the commerce of India' propounded his Drain of wealth theory.

*Ramesh Chandra Dutt also emphasized the drain of wealth theory. In his Article 'The Economic History of India' He proposed that half of the annual GDP of India is being outflowed every year. Indian National Congress in 1896 A.D. accepted the Drain Theory in Calcutta session and announced that the real cause for frequent famines and the poverty of Indian nationals is the ongoing Drain of Wealth for the previous years. Syed Ahmad Khan was loyal towards British Rule and he believed that the development of Muslim Community could take place with British government only. Dadabhai Naoroji (1825-1917 A.D.) along with W.C. Bannerjee established London India Society in 1865 A.D. which popularized the severe exploitation and the pain of Indian nationals. *Dadabhai Naoroji was the first Indian to be elected to the British House of Commons on the ticket of the Liberal Party in 1892 A.D.

The Permanent Settlement (1793 AD) was introduced by Lord Cornwallis. This system was launched in Bengal, Bihar, Odisha, Varanasi (U.P.) etc. It is also known as Ist-e-Marari, Jagirdari, Maalguzari, Bishvedari etc.

The Permanent Settlement stood on the following features - It recognized the landlords as the proprietors of the land. It also recognized the rights of a hereditary successor or lawful successors of the landlords. The government believed that these landlords would remain faithful to the British.

The landlords were given the right to transfer or sell their land. All the rights of the landlords depended on their payment of the fixed revenue on the fixed date at the treasury of the government. All their rights ended if they failed to pay. This was one reason for increased litigation. An increase in intermediaries between farmers and landlords was another reason for increased litigation.

The total amount of revenue to be paid by each landlord for his Zamindari was fixed once and for all.

It was agreed that the tax rate would not increase in the future.

(b) Both (A) and (R) are true but (R) is not the correct explanation of (A)
(c) (A) is true but (R) is false
(d) (A) is false but (R) is true

U.P.P.C.S. (Pre) 2020

Ans. (a)

British government followed different land revenue systems in different parts of India. These systems were: Permanent settlement, Ryotwari & Mahalwari. Permanent settlement was introduced in Bengal, Bihar, Odisha & Varanasi of U.P. Under this system around 19% area of entire British India was included. Ryotwari (approx. 51% area) system was in Madras, some parts of Mumbai, Eastern Bengal, Assam, Kurg. Mahalwari (around 30% of the area) system around was in U.P, Central Province, Punjab. Hence, it is clear that because of this, different classes were created in Indian peasantry. Hence, option (a) is correct.

29. With reference to revenue collection by Cornwallis, consider the following statements:

- Under the Ryotwari Settlement of revenue collection, the peasants were exempted from revenue payment in case of bad harvests or natural calamities.
- Under the Permanent Settlement in Bengal, if the Zamindar failed to pay his revenues to the state, on or before the fixed date, he would be removed from his Zamindari.

Which of the statements given above is/are correct?

- (a) 1 only (b) 2 only
(c) Both 1 and 2 (d) Neither 1 nor 2

I.A.S. (Pre) 2024

Ans. (b)

Under the Ryotwari Settlement of revenue collection, individual peasants (ryots) were directly responsible for paying land revenue to the government and peasants were not exempted from revenue payment in case of bad harvests or natural calamities. There were no explicit exemptions for bad harvests or natural calamities rather sometimes few remissions were provided and their rents were reduced. Hence, statement 1 is incorrect.

Under the Permanent Settlement in Bengal, introduced by Lord Cornwallis in 1793 A.D., 'Zamindars' were established as the proprietors or owners of land. The state's demand for land revenue was permanently fixed, but under the 'Sunset clause', if the Zamindar failed to pay tax due by sunset on a certain date, his Zamindari (landholding rights) would be taken over by the government and auctioned, and the rights would be transferred to the new owner. Hence, statement 2 is correct.

- External Rule and administration in India.
- All the civil administration and army expenses of Britain were paid by India.
- A part of India's national wealth was transferred to England for which India got no returns. India was bearing the burden of territory building both inside and outside India.

Assertion (A) : Generally, India had a favourable balance of trade during the British rule.

Reason (R) : The drain of wealth took the form of unrequired exports.

Code :

- (a) Both (A) and (R) are true, and (R) is the correct explanation of (A).
 (b) Both (A) and (R) are true, but (R) is not the correct explanation of (A).
 (c) (A) is true, but (R) is false.
 (d) (A) is false, but (R) is true.

U.P.P.C.S. (Pre) 2017

Ans. (a)

The constant flow of wealth from India to England for which India did not get an adequate economic, commercial or material return has been described by national leaders and economists as 'drain' of wealth from India. Before 1813 company had a recurring surplus which accrued from (a) profits from oppressive land revenue policy (b) profits from its trade resulting from monopolistic control over Indian markets and exactions (c) made by the company's officials. All this surplus was used by the Company as an "investment", i.e. for making a purchase of exportable items in India and elsewhere. Against the exports of goods made out of this investment, India did not get anything in return. This system was brought to an end by the charter act of 1813. From 1813 onwards economic drain took the form of 'unrequited' exports. Barring a few exceptional years, a favourable balance of trade had been the normal feature of our foreign trade till the outbreak of world war II. Therefore, it is clear that (A) and (R) both are correct and (R) is the correct explanation of (A). Dadabhai Naoroji described the drain of wealth as the "evil of all evils" and the leading cause of Indian poverty.
