Development of Education in Modern India

* The Calcutta Madarsa was established by Warren Hastings in 1780 A.D. for the study of Muslim law and related subjects. Mulla Mufduddin was the first principal (Najin) of this Madarsa. Farsi, Arabic and Muslim law were taught in this Madarsa and the graduates from here worked as interpreters in the British Raj. *The Sanskrit College was established in 1791 by Jonathan Duncan, (the resident at Benaras), for the study of Hindu law, philosophy and literature. Michael Madhusudan Dutt was granted the membership in the Royal Asiatic Society of Paris. Hollhead, in 1778, published Bengali grammars. *Sir William Jones was appointed the Judge of the Supreme Court in Calcutta during the tenure of Warren Hastings. On his initiative, in 1784, Asiatic Society was established and he himself became its first Chairman. This Society, through a magazine named Asiatic Researches tried to shed light on India's past. In this order, in 1789, he translated Abhigyan Shakuntalam of Kalidas into English. *To analyse the educational development after 1854 in India, in 1882, W.W. Hunter led Hunter Commission was established. The report of this commission emphasized on reform and development of the primary education in India. On 8th November, 1905, Rangpur National School was established. It was the first milestone in the National Education Sector. On 16th November 1905, a session was organized in Calcutta and decision was taken to establish National Council of Education, Bengal to provide education related to Science, national literature and technology. On 15th August, 1906, Satish Chandra Mukherjee and others established the National Council of Education, Bengal. *By Charter Act of 1813 an arrangement was made to spend one lakh rupees on Education. Sadler Commission was related to education. Government constituted a commission to study the possibilities of Calcutta University in 1917. Dr. M.E. Sadler who was the Vice-Chancellor of Leeds University, was appointed the chief of the commission. Dr. Ashutosh Mukherjee and Dr. Jiyauddin Ahmad were two Indian members of the commission. The commission was asked to submit a report on the education of Calcutta University. The commission suggested that if an improvement is desired in the education system of the university, then the standards of secondary education are required to be listed first. William Bentinck appointed Macaulay (the law member of Governor-General Executive Council) as head of Public education committee of Bengal to present a description of the dispute regarding the medium (language) of the Indian education system. Macaulay advocated English as the language of Indian education. The theory of downward filtration is related to education sector in colonial times. According to this theory, education should be firstly granted to a higher section of society which later on percolates slowly downward in the Society. The seed of the modern education system in India was sown by the Lord Macaulay's Minute (1835). Lord Macaulay held the view that Indian learning was inferior to European learning, He said. "A single shelf of a good European library was worth the whole literature of India and Arabia". The proposal of Macaulay was accepted by Lord William Bentinck on 7th March, 1835. During the tenure of William Bentinck, on 7th March, 1835, English was officially accepted as the medium of Indian Education.

*Considered as the "Magna Carta of English Education in India," Charles Woods despatch (1854 A.D.) was the first comprehensive plan for the spread of education In India. It proposed three Universities at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay to be established on the patterns of London University. By the efforts of D. K. Karve first woman university was established at Bombay. 'Karve' was a Social worker and reformer in Maharashtra. In 1896 A.D., he established 'Home for Widow' (Now-Maharshi Karve Stree Shikshan Samstha) in Poona. He himself married a Brahmani widow. In 1958 A.D., he was awarded the Bharat Ratna Award. *New English school was started by V.K. Chiplumkar, Bal Gangadhar Tilak & G.G. Agarkar in 1880 A.D. in Pune. Later Deccan Educational Society was established. V. K. Chiplumkar, M.G. Ranade, B.G. Tilak and M.B. Namjoshi were the main founders of the Society. Raja Ram Mohan Roy was among the earliest propagators of Modern Education in India. He along with David Hare and Alexander Duff established famous “Hindu College” in 1817 A.D. Mayo College was established in Ajmer in 1875 A.D. Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College was established in Aligarh in 1875 A.D. Delhi College was established in 1824 A.D. Madan Mohan Malviya advocated religious teachings in the Indian Universities. *In 1916, he established Banaras Hindu University and was the vice-chancellor of BHU from 1919 to 1939 A.D.. He published several magazines and Newspapers in English and Hindi such as Hindustan, The India Union, Abhyuday, Maryada, etc.

Britishers showed no interest in the advancement of learning in the early phase of their rule in India. Some of the Britishers in their personal endeavours and for political gain showed some interest in spreading education. Warren Hastings, Governor-General of Bengal, showed a keen interest in spreading oriental education. Sir William Jones, then Justice of Calcutta High Court, established the Asiatic Society of Bengal in Calcutta (1784 A.D.). Here, they started research on oriental education and culture and the British civilians were taught Indian languages, laws, customs, religion, geography, etc. By endeavours of Wilkins Jones, Colebrook and William Carey, this oriental education got a foothold. In the year 1791 A.D., Jonathan Duncan established the Sanskrit College at Varanasi (Banaras).

3. Who founded First Sanskrit Mahavidyalaya at Varanasi?

4. Given below are two statements, one is labelled as Assertion (A) and the other as Reason (R).

Assertion (A) : The Asiatic Society of Bengal was established in the period of Warren

Hastings and he modestly declined the offer of Presidentship of the learned body in favour of Sir William Jones.

Reason (R) : Warren Hastings was himself a great scholar and an ardent Orientalist who used to encourage the study of Sanskrit, Persian and Arabic.

Select the correct answer from the codes given below.

Codes :

- (a) Both (A) and (R) are true and (R) is the correct explanation of (A)
(b) Both (A) and (R) are true, but (R) is not a correct explanation of (A)
(c) (A) is true, but (R) is false
(d) (A) is false, but (R) is true

U.P. P.C.S. (Pre) 2019

Ans. (a)

Warren Hastings was the Governor General of Bengal during 1774-85 AD. He himself was a prolific scholar and a staunch supporter of oriental learning, encouraging the study of Sanskrit, Persian and Arabic. It was with his cooperation and support that the Asiatic Society of Bengal was established in 1784 AD. However, he rejected the proposal for the chairmanship of this institution in favour of Sir William Jones. Charles Wilkins, Nathaniel Halhead, Jonathan Duncan etc. contributed to the study of oriental studies under the patronage and support of Warren Hastings. Warren Hastings wrote the preface to the English translation of 'Bhagavad Gita' done by Charles Wilkins. According to the question, two things are mentioned in the statement – (1) the establishment of the Asiatic Society and (2) Warren Hastings did not accept its presidency in favour of William Jones. For the same reason, it is described that he himself was a scholar and encouraged the study of oriental studies. The encouragement for the study of oriental science here confirms the reason for both statements. Thus, it is clear that both the statement in question and the reason are correct and reason is the correct explanation of the statement. The Commission has given answer (b) to this question, which is not correct. The correct answer should be (a).

I.A.S. (Pre) 1993

Ans. (b)

The foundation of the modern educational system in India was laid by Macaulay's Minutes of 1835 A.D. (Issued on 2 February, 1835) In that minute, he commented on Sanskrit or Arabic by saying that "a single shelf of a good European library was worth the whole literature of India and Arabia.". Macaulay thus suggested making English the language of higher education in India with Western literature as the subject of study. Bentinck accepted his suggestion. Accordingly, on 7th March, 1835 A.D., a resolution passed by the Government declared: "His Lordship is of the opinion that the great object of the British Government ought to be the promotion of European literature and science amongst the natives of India and that all the funds appropriated for the purpose of education would be best employed on English education alone." Bentinck's Resolution opened a new chapter in the history of Indian education. It was at that time that Western education began to spread rapidly in India.

In 1823 A.D. the governor-general in council appointed a General Committee of Public Instructions, which had the responsibility to grant one lakh rupees for education. The committee consisted of 10 members, with Lord Macaulay as the President. Interestingly, during that time, there was a rapid change in attitude towards the composition of English education mainly due to the missionaries and the political influence of the English language. Thus, for the council of East India Company, the decision to grant money faced a greater problem. The controversy went on for 12 years. Even the General Committee of Public Instruction was also not able to decide the medium of instruction by vote, because out of 10 members, five were supporters of English language or Anglicists as the medium of instruction and the rest were supporters of the Classic language or Orientalists as a medium of instruction. This is the famous Anglicist and Orientalist controversy.

As the President of the General Committee of Public Instruction, Lord Macaulay wrote a minute (detailed) where he made the conclusion regarding the controversy. By introducing the English language for the education of masses, Macaulay's opinion was that the public mind of India might expand under the English system and through the English language it may educate the people into a capacity for better government.
