The last session of Indian National Congress attended by Bal Gangadhar Tilak was Amritsar Session, 1919. He had mellowed sufficiently to oppose Gandhi's policy of boycotting the elections to the legislative councils established as part of the reforms that followed from the Montagu-Chelmsford Report to Parliament in 1918. Instead, Tilak advised the delegates to follow his policy of 'responsive cooperation' in carrying out the reforms, which introduced a certain degree of Indian participation in regional Government. He died on 1st August, 1920.

Moderates and Extremists in Congress

*The first two decades of INC is described in history as a moderate era. Some of the prominent moderate leaders were Dadabhai Naoroji, Surendra Nath Banerjee, Mahadev Govind Ranade, Feroz Shah Mehta, Gopal Krishna Gokhale and Anand Mohan Bose. They had a sense of confidence in British justice and their generosity. They never aimed at aggressive nationalism for attaining independence. Leaders like Bal Gangadhar Tilak, Lala Lajpat Rai, Bipin Chandra Pal, raised extremist ideology. *Dadabhai Naoroji, Pherozeshah Mehta, Dinsha Wacha, Womesh Chandra Banerjee and Surendra Nath Banerjee were leaders of Moderate group, they all belonged to urban areas, in fact most of the Moderate leaders who believed in moderate politics belonged to Urban areas. The Congress during moderate phase was dominated by people having professions like Advocates, Doctors, Engineers, Journalists and Person related to Literature works. The Connection to common masses was missing in Congress during Moderate domination. *Pherozeshah

Mehta once said, “The voice of Congress is not of Masses, but it is the responsibility of citizens in contact with Congress to understand these emotions and propagate these to the Nation.”

*Gopal Krishna Gokhale was a moderate leader. He believed in the purity of Means and Ends. He was the political mentor (Guru) of Mahatma Gandhi. For the first time, he took part in politics in 1889. *In 1897 A.D., Gokhale and Dinshaw Vacha were asked to present proofs of Indian expenditure in front of ‘Welby Commission’. In 1899 A.D., Gokhale was elected to Bombay legislative council and in 1901 A.D. was elected to Imperial council of the Governor general of India. *In 1906 A.D., Extremist leaders of Congress emerged in Indian Political Scenario. Bal Gangadhar Tilak, Lala Lajpat Rai, Bipin Chandra Pal and Aurobindo Ghosh were four important extremist leaders. Their main objective was ‘Swaraj’. They didn't believe in the agitation through constitutional means of the Moderates. They blamed the Congress for politics of Petition, Prayers and Protest. Under their leadership, the policy of petition and prayers ended. *Moderates believed in constitutional agitation, annual sessions, speeches, sending petitions to English Parliament, etc but extremists believed in self-sacrifice, mass movement, aggressive resistance and strong determination. *Extremists wanted ‘Swaraj’ as “complete Independence from English” on the other hand moderates believed in “Self rule under the colonial empire”. Lala Lajpat Rai also known as Sher-e-Panjab, was the representative from Punjab and an extremist leader. He is also known as Punjab Kesari. *Lala Lajpat Rai, Bipin Chandra Pal and Bal Gangadhar Tilak are together called Lal-Bal-Pal. During a protest against Simon Commission Lala Lajpat Rai was injured in lathi charge due to which he died on 17 November, 1928 A.D. After reading the Biography of Mazzini Lala Lajpat Rai accepted him as his political mentor. *He translated a work of Mazzini ‘The Duty of Man’ in Urdu.

*During the Partition of Bengal, Aurobindo Ghosh was the main leader of the Swadeshi Movement. Other important leaders of this movement were Lala Lajpat Rai, Bal Gangadhar Tilak and Bipin Chandra Pal. Tilak believed in sacrifice and had courage to challenge British establishment. He was called the “Father of Indian unrest” by Sir Valentine Chirol. After the announcement of Tilak's sentence, Maxmuller wrote a letter to Privy Council asking mercy for Tilak describing him as a learned Individual of Sanskrit. *In 1908 A.D., Tilak was jailed for 6 Years in Mandalay (Myanmar) on the charges of treason initiated against him for printing an anti-British Article in his Newspaper ‘Kesari’. *Tilak wrote ‘Gita Rahasya’ from ‘Mandale’ prison. Starting Shivaji Mahotsav and Ganpati festival, he tried to grow the feeling of Nationalism amongst the masses. He died on 1st August, 1920 A.D., and his funeral bier was lifted by Mahatma Gandhi, Maulana Shauqat Ali and Saiffudin Kichlu. Maulana Hasrat Mohani read the eulogy after his death.

The Italian-Abyssinian War (in which the Italian colonial power was defeated), the Boxer movement against the imperialists in China during 1899-1901 A.D., and Japan's victory over Russia, influenced the direction of the national movement in India before the advent of Mahatma Gandhi, but among these, Japan's victory over Russia in the year 1905 A.D. had the most impact. Japan had proved itself militarily superior to a powerful European country by defeating Czarist Russia in the year 1905 A.D. This dispelled the false illusion that the people of the white race were invincible.

During the Moderate Phase (1885-1905 AD) of the Indian National Movement, there was support for the rich democratic and scientific culture of modern Europe. The moderate leaders advocated for constitutional reforms, political participation and the expansion of modern education. They supported English education, as they believed it would help develop a modern outlook and social progress in India. However, the growing masses viewed British colonial policies with increasing resentment. Notably, Dadabhai Naoroji strongly criticized the economic aspects of British colonialism. His book, "Poverty and Un-British Rule in India," highlighted issues related to the economic drain, heavy taxation, and the decline of Indian industries. The moderates attempted to address such concerns through constitutional means rather than direct confrontation.

The methods employed by the two groups (Moderates and Extremists) of Congress were different in their tempo and approach. Congress split into two different groups at Surat Session of Congress in 1907 A.D. While the moderates had infinite faith in the efficacy of constitutional agitation and in appealing to the British sense of justice and fair play, in holding an annual conference, making speeches, passing elaborate resolutions and sending deputations to England. The extremists had no faith in the benevolence of British public or Parliament, nor were they convinced of the efficacy of merely holding conferences. Extremists had faith in the concept of passive resistance.

Surat split (1907 A.D.), refers to the split in the Congress party into two groups : 'Moderates' and 'Extremists.' Moderates believed in the policy of settlement of minor issues with Government by deliberation, strikes, and boycotts to force their demands. The moderates opposed the resolutions on Swaraj (self-governance), Swadeshi National Education and boycott of foreign goods but extremists were not in favour of these. Hence, the difference of opinion between moderates and extremists finally reached to split in the Congress at the Surat Session (1907).
