The Cabinet Mission reached Delhi on 24 March, 1946 AD. The Cabinet Mission announced its recommendations on 16th May, 1946 AD. The main provision of the recommendations were:

(1) The whole of India, including the Princely States should form a Federation.

(2) The Central Government should be in charge of foreign affairs, defence and communication.

(3) The provinces and the states should enjoy all the powers.

The British Indian Provinces and territories were to be divided into three groups; Group A: Madras, Central Provinces and Berar, United Province, Bihar, Bombay and Orissa.

Group B: Punjab, North-West Frontier Province and Sindh.

Group C : Bengal and Assam.

Apart from this, the Provinces of Chief Commissioners, Delhi, Ajmer-Marwar and Coorg will be included in category (A) and Baluchistan will be included in category (B).

The Constituent Assembly was to be elected to frame a Constitution for the Indian Union.

The province should have the right to leave the Union in future if it so likes after elections under its new Constitution.

There should be an interim National Government with leaders of the Indian parties to take charge of the administration.
